Adderall, an amphetamine often prescribed by medical professionals to treat ADHD and narcolepsy, is a highly potent and addictive Schedule II controlled substance. In recent years, the abuse and addiction rates for this central nervous system stimulant have significantly increased. When doctors fail to educate and monitor their patients about the dangers of Adderall abuse, this drug can be very harmful, especially when combined with other psychoactive drugs. Learn how Crestview Recovery's Adderall and substance abuse treatment program can help you move forward in your life. Contact Crestview Recovery to learn more about overcoming Adderall addiction by calling 866.262.0531.

WHAT IS ADDERALL?

Before people seek an Adderall addiction treatment program in Portland, they should know more about this medicine. It's a prescription medication designed to treat ADHD. In most cases, it works best for teenagers and adolescents.

Adderall is a combination of dextroamphetamine and amphetamine. These drugs work together to stimulate the central nervous system. They also change the amount of norepinephrine and dopamine that the brain produces. As a result, taking Adderall helps people with ADHD stay focused and pay attention. Using caffeine along with Adderall increases the likelihood of side effects.

MEDICAL USES FOR ADDERALL

Adderall works by altering brain chemicals and nerves that link to hyperactivity and impulse control. It comes in two forms: instant release and extended-release, both of which treat symptoms of ADHD. However, the FDA has only approved the instant release form to treat narcolepsy. Adderall users who develop a high tolerance may turn to more dangerous stimulants when Adderall stops working for them.

HOW ADDERALL WORKS

---

When individuals take this drug exactly as prescribed, Adderall is an effective treatment for ADHD. It works by stimulating the central nervous system. Physicians usually start patients on a very low dose to avoid any unwanted side effects and symptoms. Over time, the psychiatrist will gradually increase dosage as he or she sees appropriate.

ADDERALL WORKS TO TREAT ADHD IN MANY WAYS, INCLUDING:

- Making certain neurotransmitters in the brain, such as norepinephrine and dopamine, more available — these brain chemicals are important because they increase alertness, focus, and overall energy levels.
- Maximizing heart rate and blood flow to muscles

“Crestview went above and beyond to help me navigate the addiction treatment maze — even offering information on other programs to ensure that my daughter would access treatment after detox.

Thankfully, she was able to enter Crestview the day before Thanksgiving, and while there, received a personalized treatment program that addressed substance use, mental health, trauma history, and family system issues. She had access to a clean/safe women’s residence, medication assisted treatment, individual and group therapy, community-based providers, recovery activities, skill-building, and case management. * Most importantly, the intake and clinical staff at Crestview cared deeply about her — she was not simply another client moving through the program. *

Bottom line: I would recommend Crestview Recovery to friends and family without hesitation.”

As Adderall works to perform the functions described above, it can produce feelings of energy and liveliness. When used over time, Adderall can cause people to withdraw from their social lives.

SIDE EFFECTS OF ADDERALL ADDICTION

Like all habit-forming substances, it's easy to develop an addiction to Adderall. People who use more Adderall than recommended by a doctor are at risk for developing negative side effects, chemical dependency, and needing substance abuse treatment.

Possible short-term side effects of Adderall addiction include:

- Insomnia
- Headache
- Dry mouth

- Nausea
- Loss of voice/hoarseness
- Digestive issues and loss of appetite
- Aggression
- Shortness of breath

The long-term or heavy use of Adderall can result in more serious side effects, some of which may even be dangerous to the user. A few of these long-term side effects include:

- Changes in temperament
- Lightheadedness and Chest pain
- Rashes or hives
- Vision complications
- Paranoia
- Mania
- Social withdrawal
- Seizures

If you experience any of the above long-term effects, you should consult a physician or seek medical attention as soon as possible. Overdosing on Adderall can result in dire consequences to one's health, including panic attacks, heart problems, and comas.

PORTLAND'S ADDERALL REHAB

If you or a loved one is struggling with Adderall addiction, you don't have to suffer alone any longer. Crestview Recovery offers top-quality addiction treatment programs.

We will help you stay clean while you learn the tools and knowledge you'll need for long-term recovery. A few of our addiction treatment programs and services include:

- Intensive outpatient program (IOP)
- Medication-assisted treatment
- Adderall addiction treatment

Many medications can help people who suffer from mental health disorders. For example, Adderall is a medicine that can manage attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Unfortunately, some people use these medicines even though they don't need them. In most cases, this abuse eventually leads them to need Adderall addiction treatment.

THE IMPORTANCE OF ADDERALL ADDICTION TREATMENT

Finding an Adderall addiction treatment center is important for anyone who struggles with abusing this medicine. One reason is that it causes many serious side effects. Only an Adderall addiction treatment program can help them safely overcome it.

Reports show that people who abuse Adderall experience restlessness, dizziness, and anxiety. It can also cause irregular heartbeat, high blood pressure, and seizures in some cases. To make matters worse, many teens are unaware of the side effects. College students still abuse this medicine, and studies show that abuse is on the rise. Between 2008 and 2012, the use of ADHD medication jumped 35 percent. Despite this increase, the number of people who seek Adderall addiction treatment didn't increase.

The need for an Adderall addiction treatment program in Portland is greater than ever before. However, it's up to family members to get help for loved ones because they rarely seek help for themselves.

CONTINUE YOUR RECOVERY WITH OUTPATIENT DRUG TREATMENT

You've finished with an inpatient treatment program, and you've made some great steps forward. Now's the time to explore outpatient addiction treatment therapies at Crestview Recovery.

OUTPATIENT TREATMENT: TRANSITION BACK TO LIFE

Crestview offers outpatient addiction treatment for those who finished an inpatient program. You've completed the first step of your recovery, but you can benefit from ongoing support. Besides that, working with a program that lets you live away from the center encourages you to get back to living your life.

Through outpatient drug and alcohol rehab in Portland, Oregon, you can get help to stay on track. Because relapse is a constant danger, you can actively work against it. Most importantly, you find ways of dealing with new triggers and stressors. Various therapies and techniques are part of our successful outpatient programs.

MENTAL HEALTH, ADDICTION RECOVERY & LIFE SKILLS

---

At the heart of Crestview Recovery's outpatient treatment services is life-management training. You work with caring therapists who help you settle into a sober life. They help you find housing programs or apply for temporary federal financial assistance. These are programs that get you back on your feet.

Most importantly, they take some of the pressure off. Almost all program participants benefit from assistance with a job search. Some need additional life skills training, including interview training and skill sharing.

Besides that, you can undergo ongoing behavioral counseling that promotes ongoing healing and psychological wellness. Similarly, you take more control over your healing. In the past, you might have relied on therapists to do so. Now, you focus on personal growth.

“Great treatment facility if your ready to get clean and sober! If not can be a little too much freedom and temptation and can spread into the houses. Overall tho a great experience with solid staff members who genuinely care about the clients!”

OUR TEAM MENTALITY PROMOTES RECOVERY

One of our addiction treatment therapies is group treatment. You meet with peers who're also in recovery and open up about current struggles. Peer counseling and accountability can work together to help you deal with the situation; thus, it can help you prepare for situations you might not anticipate. Some of our core mental health therapies include the following options:

- Dialectical behavior therapy to build emotional equilibrium
- Cognitive-behavioral therapy to correct thought & behavior patterns
- Motivational interviewing to strengthen resolutions to stay in recovery
- Intensive one-on-one therapy
- Dual diagnosis treatment for co-occurring mental health conditions

Outpatient care begins with insurance verification. This enables an intake advisor to prepare you for program participation. A Crestview Recovery representative can then explain the addiction treatment program. If you want outpatient support in overcoming addiction in the Portland area, Crestview Recovery can help.
